Aloha from FHEP!

In honor of Martin Luther King Jr. and in memory of the civil rights he fought, nonviolently, to make real:

Housing Conditions Worse for Native Americans and Alaska Natives

In 2009, Congress mandated that the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) conduct a study into the housing needs of Native Americans and Alaskans in both rural and urban settings. Results of the study show that numerous factors have resulted in housing standards actually becoming worse for both ethnic groups compared to other U.S. households.

Overcrowding is common and the availability of quality housing is extremely low. The study found that overcrowding and stressed housing units, or housing units in need of major maintenance or repairs, comprised of 34% of Native households, compared to a mere 7% of other U.S. households.

Urban Institute, the D.C. based think-tank that led the study, released their findings on Jan. 19th, 2017. To read the full report, click here.

Check back next month for the report on Native Hawaiian's housing needs.

What the NFHA has to say about Ben Carson, Secretary-Designate of HUD

January 12, 2017

Dr. Ben Carson sat through his confirmation hearing on January 12th, where he was questioned by various members of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs on his policy and moral views about the department he had been picked to lead. The National Fair Housing Alliance (NFHA), a consortium of more than 220 fair housing groups committed to ending housing discrimination, released a statement after Dr. Carson's testimony that offered a refreshing air of optimism for the Secretary-Designate. Prior to the hearing, Dr. Carson had expressed his opinion against HUD's Affirmatively Furthering Fair Housing rule which led many to be doubtful that Dr. Carson would fully enforce this and other fair housing laws. Despite his previous views, Dr. Carson testified to the Senate that he would vigorously enforce fair housing laws, among supporting other HUD programs that became prominent under the Obama administration.

New Jersey Supreme Court: Poor Residents Have the Right to Affordable Housing

January 18, 2017

The Supreme Court of New Jersey has decided in a unanimous 6-0 ruling that the state's municipalities have an obligation to provide affordable housing to low and middle-income residents. While income and economic status are not federally protected classes, New Jersey's ruling means that poorer families won't have to compete for a limited supply of slum rentals in neighborhoods fraught with crime and poverty. Instead, NJ municipalities now will have to ensure that residents on the lower end of the economic spectrum will have a viable opportunity to remain in the community they are from, or more importantly the community that they choose.

HUD: Houston's Housing Policies Violate Texan's Civil Rights

January 13, 2017

HUD has recently concluded a 5 month long investigation into the city of Houston's racially-motivated housing policies as it pertains to permitting for the development of affordable housing for low to medium-income residents. A prominent topic of HUD's investigation was an affordable housing complex that Houston's Mayor, Sylvester Turner, objected to after an outcry from nearby residents who did not want to see the project built in their neighborhood. HUD has determined that this objection perpetuates segregation of minorities away from more affluent communities and violates the Fair Housing Act's rule of Affirmatively Furthering Fair Housing.

HUD has sent a 14 page letter to Mayor Turner of Houston which outlines the findings of their investigation and lists demands for the city to immediately implement in order to avoid further litigation. To read the letter and to see Mayor Turner's response, click here.
